

CANARY WHARF FINANCIAL INSTITUTION CASE STUDY

THE CLIENT

The London office of a leading blue-chip US based financial institution, managed by Norland Managed Services.

THE CHALLENGE

Norland's Property Manager, overseeing two Canary Wharf buildings, became increasingly concerned about health and safety implications due to water spillage in washrooms servicing trading floors. It was discovered that the absence of appropriate washing facilities for Muslims to perform their pre-prayer washing ritual was contributing to the issue.

THE SOLUTION

After a consultation process between Norland and a group of their client's Asian staff, the decision was made to install WuduMate Compact ablution appliances. WuduMate was chosen for their innovative solution, addressing the limited space available.

Many of our clients have a typical, modern day, ethnically diverse workforce, and we need to keep abreast of innovative new products which help provide for this fast- changing makeup of our society. The Specialist Washing Company were extremely helpful when we contacted them, immediately able to relate to our issues, and this helped us to quickly provide an ideal solution to this sensitive issue. In hindsight, it would have been easier if the WuduMates had been included in the buildings' original designs, and in the future, we would encourage this.
